Presentation

Clinical Nutrition is the area of nutrition that focuses on the application of nutritional and dietary principles in the context of caring for individuals, especially those with specific health conditions. With the increase in the prevalence and incidence of diet-related pathologies, Lusófona University's Master's in Clinical Nutrition focuses on the postgraduate training of professionals who will play a fundamental role in optimising health, preventing or treating pathologies and improving quality of life through food, always in accordance with the latest clinical guidelines.
