Presentation

The two-year (four semesters) master's program of studies in Educational Sciences consists of a mandatory common core and two specializations. While the common core aims at in-depth training, in transversal subjects of Education Sciences, the specializations (from the 2nd semester) are directed towards a personalized selection, corresponding to the interests, motivations and personal and professional paths of the target audience. Therefore, in the Master of Science in Education, students will be able to choose between the following areas of specialization: i) Pedagogical Supervision and Training of Trainers; ii) Educational Administration. The second year includes the Research and Dissertation Seminar, with specific guidance, reinforcing the tutorial and online monitoring, in order to respond to the students' pedagogical needs and to deepen the research process. In addition, conferences will be held (open to all interested parties) on current topics, related to the areas of specialization of the Master's
