Postgraduation • Lisboa
POLITICAL PSYCHOLOGY

Direction

Fernanda Pereira
p303@ulusofona.pt

Secretariat

Catarina Alexandra Pereira Martins
f6302@ulusofona.pt

Duration	Credits
0 Years	22 ects

Presentation

The postgraduate programme in Political Psychology integrates the disciplinary fields of Political Science and Psychology. It involves the study of basic behavioural phenomena and the phenomena of political action, participation and decision-making. Psychology focuses on the basic processes of human behaviour and group and social dynamics, while Political Science focuses on the basic principles and mechanisms that regulate political and social processes. This proposal offers a specialised training course through a body of knowledge that is useful in both a professional and academic context. In the professional sphere, it discusses the framework of political participation and the exercise of power, promoting ways of understanding, interpreting and intervening. In the academic sphere, it focuses on the theoretical foundations for achieving a technical understanding of these political phenomena, using the conceptual systems of Psychology and Political Science. This postgraduate programme is designed to provide excellent training for professionals who work, or intend to work, in various fields, such as politics, business, journalism and academia. COURSE LEARNED IN E-LEARNING - you can find information and ways to access the resources and technologies we make available for distance learning and collaboration. Everything is

STUDY PLAN

1st Year / Common Core

Anual	ects
Citizenship and Civil Society	2
Critical Thinking and Political Involvement	2
Digital Policy	2
Diversity and Pluralism	2
Ethics and Deontology in Political Behaviou	2
Mass Psychology and Political Leadership	2
Negotiation and Conflict Mediation	2
Political Behavior Studies	2
Psychological Dynamics of Political Actors	2
Psychology of Political Organisations	2
Society and Political Culture	2