Presentation

The Economics degree stands out for its practical approach and face-to-face teaching, providing an interactive and dynamic learning environment. Complex economic concepts are explored through classroom debates and discussions, encouraging active student participation. The course favors practical methodologies, such as case studies and simulations, which allow students to apply the knowledge they have acquired in real contexts. In addition, internships promote the development of interpersonal skills, networking and teamwork, which are essential for the job market. Access to advanced resources and integration into an intercultural environment provide a global and differentiated education.
