Presentation

The Master's degree program in Educational Sciences is an opportunity for training for individuals who want to comprehend the educational journeys of individuals and communities and develop appropriate responses to current contexts. Its main objective is to provide training for socially relevant scientific research for teachers, researchers, trainers, professionals in planning and administration, adult education, pedagogical supervision, and inclusive education. The current structure of the Master's degree program in Educational Sciences at Universidade Lusófona de Lisboa offers four areas of specialization in addition to a common general training for all students. These specializations include Public Policies and Educational Contexts, Adult Education and Community Intervention, Pedagogical Supervision, and Inclusive Education.
